Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from North Dakota Magazine, Vol. 3: September, 1909 Hope springs eternal in the human breast. The Indians of America, no less than the white men of Europe, and the brown men of Asia, have had many prophets and messiahs, who have taught them in spiritual things. Among the Indian teachers, one of the most noted was the prophet of the Delawares, who claimed to have visions in which he received instructions from the Master of Life, who taught a return to the simple life of the redman as the only avenue to Indian happiness. His followers were required to give up all they had acquired from the white men and return to the fire sticks and bows and arrows of their fathers, when it would be possible for them to organize and drive away the white men who were encroaching upon them. In 1805 there was a prophet among the Shawnees, a brother to the great and good Tecumseh, much older than the latter, who also communed with the Master of Life, giving revelations to his followers.
