The same is true of pharmaceutical preparations; their crystalline forms furnish a certain test of the nature of the crystallized body. --The theory of crystallization is still obscure. It may be conceived that the particles of bodies are of certain regular figures, and that, in uniting, they may be disposed to approach by certain sides, in preference to others, probably by those which admit of the most extensive contact. Hence a regular structure and figure, uniform with regard to each substance, will be produced. ---The numerous diversified figures of crystals may be reduced to others more simple; thus the equilateral, six-sided prisms, and the double six-sided pyramid of calc-sjwr, or carbonate of lime, may be reduced by successive sections (parallel to natural joints in these crystals) to the rhomboid. The figure tints arrived at by mechanical division, and which is supposed to constitute the nucleus of the crystal, is called the primitive form. The number of original forms thus obtained, according to M. Hatty, amounts to six; 1. the regular tetrahedron; 2. the parallelepipedon, which includes the cube, the rhomboid, and all the solids, which have six faces parallel, two and two; 3. the octahedron, the surfaces of which are triangles, and, according to the species, equilateral, isosceles, or scalene; 4. the hexagonal prism; 5. the dodecahedron, with rhombic faces; 6. the dodecahedron, with triangular faces. --The secondary forms of crystals, or such as are usually exhibited by nature, are supposed to grow out of the...
