Excerpt from Romantic Narratives: From Scottish History and Tradition When David invaded England, and was defeated and taken prisoner at the battle of Durham, in 1346, Edward Baliol, judging that his star was emerging from the abyss of misfortune, entered Galloway, and was cordially welcomed by the Maculachs and others; but his cause made no head - the stars in their courses were fighting against him. Negotiations being set on foot by the Scots for the ransom of their sovereign, Baliol appointed three Commissioners, one of whom was Patrick Maculach, to protest before Edward III. And his Council against the liberation, on any terms, of the royal captive The protest was duly made, and in response King Edward gave assurance that nothing should be done prejudicial to the Baliol interest. But King David was ultimately released, and Baliol's adherents in wild Galloway were soon subdued. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
