Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Here we deal with the use of armoured fighting vehicles in unconventional warfare. The events in this book are time wise about four years after Code Name Dawson or GMJ 5 and the furthest in the future of all GMJ Books at this stage. In my life, I spoke to many South African armour officers, they follow, something between the Russian and Prussian outlook on war. The Russians see war as a science, the Prussians as an art where instinct plays a large role. These officers combined the two doctrines, they see logistics, by God, and then elan, for lack of a better word, to create a force multiplier or what the Yanks call the shock and awe principle. They go in at tremendous force (the German Schwerpunkt) and without any known fear, hammering and overwhelming, destroying what they want to, leave nasty surprises behind (long range artillery, air strikes, Special Forces, booby traps) and then get out and God knows when they will be back except that they will be back if needs be. It is called destabilisation or pre-emptive strikes and it works. Have no doubt, they will always attack first. They studied the Israelis and everyone else in very great detail and they are aggressive to the point of insanity. You can learn from them, in how to use very little, reinforced battalions, not divisions, to achieve astonishing results, roaming around at will. I would say it comes down to elan, leadership and training with an utter belief, more actually, a habit, of winning. The South African armoured vehicles have twice the range of any comparable vehicle and all are landmine resistant from the beginning, they also have way...
