Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: .he led on before; Where red men, too, have halted in their grief To pile them up a little mossy mound, To mark the spot where some old warrior chief Doth rest within his happy hunting ground. Where in some cave shaped out by nature s hands I ll hear the noisy brook go babbling by, Or, plunging deep into the forest s shade, Will catch but glimpses of the azure sky; Then on a bed prepared from pine tree s boughs I long at length my weary form to lay, Where I can hear the whippoor-will at eve And view the closing of a perfect day. MY AMBITION I dare not hope to conquer fame, Mpr ever see the time When in this body I shall dwell Upon the heights sublime. But I would love to make men glad, And be content the while To cast mine with the common lot, Could I but make them smile. Then would I love to steal away, To greet the coming dawn, And leave the whole world smiling still Long after I had gone. THE QUESTION. The day had disappointment brought, And I was sore distressed; A sob of pain burst from my lips, As I lay down to rest. But Morpheus came softly down, And lulled me off to sleep; And then I dreamed that thou didst come And bid me not to weep. And thou wast robed in spotless white, A smile was on thy face;...
