Excerpt from The Ruins of Paestum, Otherwise Posidonia in Magna Graecia And here, he cannot but observe with Pleasure, the great Improvements (the Effect of generous Encouragement) that his Countrymen have made in the several Branches of Art. Their Productions, particularly in Painting and Engraving, so generally approved at the annual public Exhibitions, sufficiently refute invidious Reflections sometimes thrown on them, that their chief Efforts center in Schemes of raising a Fortune: and also the unfavourable Opinion, entertained by some Foreigners of the Abilities of the English Artists. If we consider the Disadvantage they labour under, of not having hitherto had any Public Academy; and of being, for the most Part, obliged to complete their Studies abroad; it is rather to be wondered that they have made so great a Progress; and is a convincing Proof of the natural Strength of English Genius, not less capable of distinguishing itself in the liberal Arts, than in the most abstruse Sciences.
