Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Daniel Defoe, Vol. 3: His Life and Recently Discovered Writings Public Spirit, in modern as compared with ancient times, is a very able performance. It Will be observed that on the oth November, in the same year, Defoe notices the then new practice of concealing the writers of public Journals; and alludes in general terms to Bishops, Noblemen, and other eminent persons, as being then among such writers. On several subsequent occasions he sufficiently indicates some of them, with the exception of the Duke of Wharton. I am not aware that it has ever been publicly known that men of rank were then active contributors to the periodical papers; yet a List of them would include Bishops Atterbury, and B. Hoadley; Dr. E. Young; Sir R. Walpole Lord Bolingbroke; the Duke of Ormond, and probably others. The article for the 1st February, 1724, contains some severe strictures on the posthumous publication of the late Bishop Burnet s History of his own Times. In an ironical Essay against judicial Astrology, published the following week, will be found an amusing story how the Duke of Mantua sent the horoscope of a new born Mule to the most celebrated Astro logers in Italy, who supposing it to be that of a human being, answered accordingly. One of them, declaring it would be come a Bishop, our Author adds, he did not say he should write a History of his own Times. As the infirmities of age increased, I find in Defoe an increasing disposition towards grave subjects, and this pervades even his satires, often giving a peculiar fineness to the exercise of a faculty possessed by him in a pre-eminent degree. I think...
