Excerpt: . is a caricature upon human decency, a living libel on mankind. I can only say that if a ball of tartar emetic, as big as the planet Jupiter, were thrown into the jaws of hell, they would not vomit forth in all the throes of their intestinal agony a more abject jumble of diabolism and corruption than the. chapter at this University. This was counted a masterpiece in its day and represented the dominant ideas regarding inter-fraternity relationships in America s centennial year. Q Froth from Chapter Letters is the title of a number of contributions to one of the fraternity magazines which possess unusual merit from the point of view of genuine humor. The collector arranges his extracts under appropriate headings, but the language 128 Bjfra 0#Ttt IE of the original writer is left unchanged. If chapter letters were published exactly as...
