Excerpt: .murdered on his way, and only rescued by a justice of the peace named Hyde, who charged with a party of horse and bore him off, while an impudent fellow declared he should kill the justice before he had done with him, and the shout To Hyde s house, ahoy I was raised, and in VOL. IX. N Cameo XXI. Fires in London. 1779. a short time it was levelled with the ground. The Lords adjourned and did nothing. The Commons had assembled to the number of 192 and Lord George Gordon appeared with the blue cockade in his hat. Colonel Herbert at once ordered 11.; o lake off that badge of sedition; he obeyed and put it in his pocket. He had begun to grow alarmed, and had issued a handbill disavowing the violences. Burke and Sir George Savile both insisted on means being taken to restore order, but Fox declared that the vices and follies of the administration had loosened the bonds of society, and a sort of compromise was arrived at, that when the present disorders were appeased, the petitions should be taken into consideration. Fresh dreadful news was brought in from the City. There was a proposal of taking Lord George into custody and sending him to the Tower, but it came to nothing, and every one ended by hurrying off. The news from the City was bad enough. Newgate was stormed. The Governer Akerman escaped while his furniture was being...
