GEOGRAPHICAL. / in the study of a nation s life men bring with them different motives. The merchant has a commercial, the soldier a military, the naturalist a scientific and the politician a political interest in each country. Thus the attitude of each one toward another land is determined by the standpoint from which it is regarded. The Christian considers every country from the point of view of Christ s command to evangelize the world. /The discovery of Japan was no exception to this rule. The great Venitian traveler, Marco Polo, in the thirteenth century, at the Court of Kublai Khan, in China, heard for the first time of Chi-pan-gu (Japan). His graphic description of its beauty, its wealth and its people, awakened a deep interest in Europe. This interest was reawakened by Pinto who came to Japan in 1542. The Portugese fitted out..
