Was not your seat on the beach very hot for want of shade? I can not +conceive how you could attempt to write a letter, and catch fish at the same time! 7. I should enjoy a sail very much, if I were not considered troublesome. I hope the boys will catch plenty of fish in your nets. As William has given you a pair of globes, I have just sent off those I intended for you to your cousin Caroline, who, I am sure, will be very glad of them, as she has not even a small pair. Believe me, your affectionate aunt, ELIZABETH WILSON. To Teachers.--It is an excellent plan for the teacher to require each member of the class to write upon a slate, or paper, such words as he may give out from the Reading Lesson, directing a mutual exchange of slates for correction. This impresses upon the mind the appearance as well as the sound of words, and will form a useful auxiliary to the Spelling-book; though there can be no substitute for that indispensable drill. LETTER III.-Mn, Watford to Mrs. Wilson. The Glebe: St. Albans. 1. Emma has been in despair, my dear sister, ever since the receipt of your letter; she begs me, as soon as possible, to clear up the mistakes which, in her extreme ignorance, she has +committed. In the first place, she is very anxious that I should...
