THE RELIGION OF DEMOCRACY For over a thousand years the history of the world has been made by two great forces--the church and the state--the church basing its power on idealism and moral forces, the state . depending almost entirely upon military power. At times these two forces have seemed for a while to co-operate, and then to become antagonistic. Today they are absolutely distinct, working in different fields, with but little ground in common, and a rival claims the middle of the stage, for during the last century there has come into the world another force, which has concerned itself but little with our religious activities, and interested itself in our political activities only in so far as it could make the political forces serve its ends. I speak of the modern business system, based on the tremendously increased productive capacity of...
