CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform, U.S.A., 2014. Soft cover. Condition: New. No Jacket. Nick Carter began as a pulp fiction private detective in 1886 and appeared in a variety of roles over more than a century. The books were written by Nick Carter or "Nicholas Carter", who in reality was a number of different authors for a number of different publications. By 1915 Nick Carter had been replaced with a more varied cast of characters but was revived in the early 30s due to the success of The Shadow and Doc Savage. Novels featuring Carter continued through the 1950s. Following the success of James Bond in the 1960s, Nick Carter became a secret agent, aka Killmaster in which updated guise he featured in a long-running series of adventures. This is a reprint of the earliest Nick Carter stories (published in 1900) and includes The Crime of the French Café, Nick Carter's Ghost Story and The Mystery of St. Agnes Hospital. Early Nick Carters, i.e. before he became Killmaster, are very rare and if found, quite expensive. Therefore it is unfortunate that the publishers have put a picture of a Starbucks and its brethren on the cover as 20ish people playing with their smartphone have no connection with the stories. Ignore that and enjoy three mysteries from 115 years ago.
