Despite medical progress, healthcare costs in the United States have risen to more than 2 trillion, or about 16 percent of the Gross Domestic Product ( GDP ), and they grow at a rate greater than the GDP. The average amount spent on healthcare per person is about 7, 100 today. The causes of healthcare inflation are varied and complex, but it is clear that this growth rate is unsustainable in the long term and will impose an enormous burden on our peo-ple and the competitiveness of our Nation. Biomedical research alone will not solve all of these problems, but it is an essential component toward a sustainable future. NIH and its scientists understand the need to reduce the impact of this great chal-lenge through transformative discoveries and their rapid translation from laboratory to patients. While seeking medical discoveries that will address ongoing concerns, we must also be prepared to confront new and unpredictable threats. Emerging and re-emerging infectious diseases are on the rise, as micro-organisms develop strategies for evading our best drugs. We face the rapid globalization of mass transportation and the staggering worldwide threat of HIV AIDS and other familiar foes. We must stand ready for the threat of pandemic influenza and of man-made bioweapons for which we have greatly expanded our investments in the past several years. Address-ing these many new threats will require sustained scientific efforts and further...
