Brand New Book. Excerpt from God s Culture of His Vineyard: A Sermon, Delivered at Plymouth Before the Robinson Congregation, on the 22nd of December, 1831 He has given them the necessary powers to be converted. They possess every intellectual qualification to act in view of motives. Every sinner is endued with mind, conscience and heart. He has the power of remembering past events, and of calling to his aid the experience of life. The noted events of his past life are easily remembered. He is also able to draw conclusions from experience and established facts. He forms a judgement upon those topics which come to his Observation and can compare and see the agreement or: disagreement be tween ideas. Every sinner has a conscience, by which he is able to discriminate between good and evil. He perceives some actions right, and others wrong, some affections holy and others sinful. And feels that it is wrong to murder and right to preserve life, wrong to cherish hatred towards God or any of his crea tures and right to love them. Every sinner possesses a heart, by which he can love or hate, choose the path of virtue or vice, and devote his soul to the world or to God. On this ground sinners are accountable to God, and he claims the right of de manding their obedience to his will. By the powers God has given, he requires every sinner to renounce his sins and turn to him. He can perceive his great and amiable perfections in his works and word, and can accept the offers of life through a Redeemer...
