Sundeep Prakashan, 1996. Hardcover. Condition: New. First edition. The Pararaton is a sixteenth century historical text composed in medieval Kawi language which deals with the Ancient History of South East Asian in general and the Indonesian archipelago in particular. Apart from it, there is only one historical text on this subject. This work titled Nagarakrtagama is a fourteenth century text composed by Rakawi Prapanca of the Majapahit Kingdom in verse form in classical Kawi language. Thus the Pararaton is of immense historical importance for the scholars of indology and ancient Indonesian history as it provides a deep insight of the ancient Indonesian socio-political structure in a reasonably authentic manner. It makes an interesting reading of myths and reality, wars of hegemony, palace intrigues, diplomatic manoeuvres, succession of kings and, on top of all, the rise and fall of the two most mighty empires, namely Sinhasari and Majapahit. The book opens with an account of Ken Anrok (Rajasa) the founder ruler of the Sinhasari kingdom who claimed himself to be the son of God Brahma. The reader is told about Rajasa's battle with king Jaya-Katong (Krtajaya) of Daha. Visnuvardhana was one of the other important rulers of the Sinhasari kingdom. King Krtanagara who came next in succession had to face a series of battles. On the ruins of the Sinhasari kingdom, arose the Majapahit kingdom which later on during the reign of king Hayam-wuruk Krtarajasa and his great Prime Minister Gajahmads witnessed its golden age. King Vijaya was the founder ruler of this dynasty. The Majapahit dynasty had to face a number of revolts during the reign of king Jayanagara. Some of the important rebellions described are Ranga Lawe (1231), Sora (1233), Juru Demun (1235), Gajah-biru (1236), Mandana and Wagal (1237), Nambi (1238), Lasem and Semi (1240) and Kuti (1241). One...
