Chas; Henry Hamilton Wright, D.D., Ph; D.; With Extracts From His Writings and Journals This brief memoir offers an earnest tribute to the life and work of one of the ablest, most energetic, and most learned Divines of our times. It describes how Dr. Wright s career commenced with deep spiritual influences in his youth and early manhood, and was maintained in full vigour through very varied and arduous experiences in the promotion and defence of the Christian and Protestant Faith. He was equally vigorous and successful as a Chaplain at Dresden and Boulogne, in charge of a Parish at Belfast, Dublin, and Liverpool; and all the while he was prosecuting profound studies in the ancient Scriptures, and was equal at any moment to undertaking such scholarly efforts as a learned course of Lectures at Oxford or Trinity College, Dublin. In the later years of his life he was contented, without abandoning his learned studies, to devote the greater part of his time to the work of active opposition to Roman doctrine and practice; and the Protestant Reformation Society had the good fortune to be represented in its work of popular advocacy by a scholar who, like all the best Irish Divines, was complete master of the doctrinal issues involved, and as a Parish Minister was intimately familiar with their practical bearings. It is excusable for his friends to regret that so much of his later years was expended in these polemical details, and that he was not placed, by a due recognition of his services and his powers, in a position which would have enabled him to concentrate...
