Brand New Book. Excerpt from The Poultry and Egg Situation, Vol. 163: Jan-Feb. 1953 The situation later, particularly toward the end of the year, will depend upon the volume of egg production. Output then will be influenced not only by the likely resumption of the upward trend in rate of lay per bird, but also by the number of chickens to be raised in 1953. Farmers reported in February that they intend to raise h percent fewer chickens than in 1952 for laying flock replacement. Wever, the egg-feed price relationships in the past few months have been encouraging to egg producers, and they are likely to continue so. This may induce farmers to raise more chickens this year than they intended on February 1. Although the egg-feed price ratio in January was below average, it was 19 per cent above a year earlier. In past years a marked improvement in the ratio usually has been accompanied by an increase in the number of chickens raised. In January and early February, egg...
