

A Mediated Access Control Infrastructure for Dynamic Service Selection

By Christoph Fritsch

Shaker Verlag Jul 2012, 2012. Buch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - The vision of smart business networks is grounded on collaborative collections of loosely coupled and sometimes even competing companies which are operating across physical distances but committed to common goals and objectives. In such a network information and communication technologies are extensively used to enhance the individual businesses, integrate their competencies and skills and thereby develop new business potential for the benefit of all partnering organizations. In this book it is argued that as a technical infrastructure for smart business networks service oriented architecture (SOA) might serve very well. However, there is a growing consensus on the fact that current SOA have not yet fully delivered their promise of spontaneous and 'on-the-fly' service discovery, substitution, and composition because a mediating instance, i.e. one that formalizes the meaning of services and their preand post-conditions as well as non-functional properties, was missing. This missing link can be provided, for example, by a central enterprise service bus (ESB). Against this background and from the viewpoint of the different technical entities involved in a smart business network setting the author overviews, analyzes, discusses, and puts into perspective the requirements and technologies that can be...
