Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . In Writing in the Maison Bleue veteran writer Francine Costington joins six writers of all ages at the idyllic Maison Bleue by the Canal du Midi. Francine own story - reaching right back to her girlhood in wartime France - unfolds among the every different stories of her companions. And she herself makes a special bond with nineteen year old Joe who a year ago was living in a hostel. Past tragedies and present dramas merge as their experiences at the Maison Bleu changes the lives of the writers at the Maison Bleue retreat. You can t have rules for writers, says crime-writer Ruthie Dancing. That would be like herding peacocks. Ruthie suspects that her plan for a Writer s Retreat at the beautiful Maison Bleue on the banks of the Canal du Midi might be a monumental folly. There is conflict, drama and sexual tension in this hothouse of writing, where the magic of the writing process rubs off on all the guests, bringing healing to some, injury to others, for one writer a great new start in life and for writer Francine Costigan the space and time to write of her experiences as a girl in World War Two when she carried messages for the Resistance. Comment from authier Laurence Phillips Meeting Francine at La Maison Bleue was a longed for treat, having been first teased as to her arrival in Agde some months earlier. We had chatted online about my encounter with the Real Francine the elderly woman I had seen remembering the Resistance. So I had looked forward to allowing myself some time alone with the book. However, this novel proved much more than a wartime memoir, it...
