Frederick, Conrad and Manfred of Hohenstaufen, Kings of Sicily: The Chronicle of Nicholas of Jamsilla 1210-1258 (Paperback)

By Louis Mendola

Trinacria Editions, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. In the decade following the death of Frederick II in 1250, his sons Conrad and Manfred had to defend the Kingdom of Sicily against covetous popes and traitorous barons. This is the only contemporary chronicle to recount these events from the point of view of the Hohenstaufen dynasty and their Ghibelline supporters. Here is the first English translation of the chronicle written in Latin at the traveling court of Manfred Hohenstaufen. Its publication in English is a milestone in the study of a key period in Italian and German history. The fascinating Jamsilla Chronicle takes its name not from its narrator but from the medieval owner of its oldest manuscript, a codex kept in Naples. The name Jamsilla is a corruption of Joinville, an Angevin family that flourished in Italy after 1270. However, it is clear the chronicler was somebody close to King Manfred, and he offers us much insight into the monarch's exploits; many candidates have been advanced by historians as Nicholas of Jamsilla. Most of the news recounted here centers on the period from 1250 until Manfred's coronation in 1258. The chronicle was...
