Are GDP/GNP appropriate measures of development?

By Martin Lochner

GRIN Verlag Mrz 2011, 2011. sonst. Bücher. Book Condition: Neu. 210x148x1 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Topic: Development Politics, grade: 2.0, Friedrich-Alexander University Erlangen-Nuremberg (Institut für Politische Wissenschaft), course: Introduction to Development Studies, 12 entries in the bibliography, language: English, comment: Kommentar der Dozentin: My only secure with the essay is that it is very short indeed (well under the recommended length for a pro-seminar work). It is a pity: more illustrations would have certainly given you a first class essay. , abstract: One of the most important questions of development politics is what development actually means and how you can measure it. Although nobody will seriously dispute the fact that development has an important political dimension it is usually the economy which is in the focus of multinational organizations as for example the IMF or the Worldbank. The most important indicator for economic prosperity is the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) respectively the GNP which is a close relative. In fact the Worldbank defines developing countries as countries with low or middle levels of GNP per capita (Worldbank...
