Jesus was the first and greatest missionary to ever live on this earth. He left his home culture of heaven and fully incorporated himself into the life and culture of a particular people at a particular point in time. He made his life an open book for us to observe and learn from. His passion for His Fathers work was clearly revealed in everything he did and said. The Passion Week brings his teaching and life into even sharper focus as he encountered the different groups that made up the culture, both religious and secular, of his time. This is the second volume of a series of three volumes. This series of studies takes a look at what Jesus said and did and how those events can help us be more effective in reaching out to the lost of our world today. The issues, questions and conflicts have not changed. They are the same. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
