As it is necessary to gather the eggs quite often during the severe cold weather to prevent freezing the attendant collecting the eggs always carries warm water to replenish any fountains that are dry, or are beginning to freeze. Rock salt is also before the fowls where they can get at it at will, and right here let me say that I consider it just as necessary to supply your fowls with salt as it is to supply any other live stock. This is the method of feeding that was followed the past winter, and we were successful in having our egg basket well filled during the severest winter weather. This winter we feed in much the same manner. For the morning...
