Excerpt from The Southwestern Historical Quarterly, Vol. 21: January, 1918 There dissatisfaction already existed over the 12} cent fee which the settlers had agreed to pay, and in an Open letter of August 6, Austin made it plain that they must fulfill their contracts. He had risked his life, health, and property in the enterprise, and would make the fortunes of all his followers; to the expense already borne he must still add that of surveying and of issuing and recording titles; the government did not pay a cent toward these expenses, and a moment's reflection would convince them that they must help him a little. Those who could must pay money, others any kind of property that would not be a dead loss to him - horses, mules, cotton, hogs, poultry, furs, beeswax, home-made cloth, dressed deerskins, etc., - part down and the balance in two, three, and four years. Most of what he collected would really go to improve the colony, so that all would benefit from it.⁴⁹ Four days later Bastrop, whom the Governor had appointed commissioner to extend titles to the settlers, pointed out to them some of the advantages which they enjoyed through Austin's labors: his Grant was confirmed, their titles were secure, and would be issued at once; no other contract had been approved, Austin's grant was limited to three hundred families, Austin was absolute in determining who should be received into the colony, and those rejected by him. Would have to retire to. The interior, there to await the disposition of the government.⁵⁰ The murmuring continued, but for a time they paid the fee. About the...
