And A. M., May 13, 1896 They are both among the most perfect types of the New England town. They were both possessed and established as organized communities soon after the termination of the French and Indian Wars, by men and women whose superiors as state makers have never been known since the dawn of civilization succeeded the night of barbarism. Freemasonry was introduced in this region, and a Lodge, Chapter, Council, and Commandery, for the exemplification of the rites of the institution, were established by these same sturdy pioneers and their immediate successors. Under whatever forms and organizations its principles have been perpetuated, the stable and progressive character of that old stock is unmistakably recognized in the two establishments of the fraternity, Franklin lodge and St. Andrews Chapter, with whom we now take a retrospect of the past and contemplate the future. Freemasonry Established In The Province Of New Hampshire. Some of...
