The end should be not to favor husbands or wives as such, but to uphold and promote the encouragement and perpetuity of There should be a reward for labor, service and duty in the marriage relation, not merely for the skill to captivate by wiles, or perhaps deceitfully to make a sharp bargain. the family. For that purpose the family state should as far as possible be made, not terrifying, but inviting; no furnishing a prospect of legal struggles and financial ruin, but of permanence, of economic success, of contentment and happiness. The courts should not afford encouragement or a prospective reward for the party plaintiff who seeks to break up a home. It seldom does good to enslave one of the parties under the principle of permanent alimony, for marriages that have existed but..
