Height, about thirty to thirty-six inches. Digitalis.--The garden varieties of this noble flower, which is pretty as a weed, but grows four or six feet high as now improved, comprises many shades of colour, from dark purple and red to white, is a favourite for blooming among shrubs, for its spikes of bloom tower above the evergreens, and make a fine show. Columbine.--These are most delicate, and assume many varieties of colour, and some are richly mottled with red and white or purple. Moreover, it is a very graceful plant, growing variously from one to four feet high. Sweet Williams.--Until late years this useful and showy perennial was a common but favourite border-flower, but within the last twenty, an...
