Excerpt from Rejoice With Them That Rejoice: A Sermon, Preached in Canterbury Cathedral, on Occasion of the Prince of Wales s Marriage, March 10, 1863 Now let me not be mistaken. There is, and must be, an outward sobriety, and a special mode ration in outward enjoyments, belonging to such a frame of mind as that which I have been describ ing. A man cannot be lamenting his sins before God, and taking his fill of worldly dissipation, at the same time. And therefore the general habit among Christians of the members of the Reformed Churches is a wise and good one - to check, at such a season, even their ordinary lawful indul gence in social pleasures: to let the whole outward aspect of the time be such as to encourage, rather than interrupt, the Christian s attitude of mind.
