G. P. Putnam's Sons, E Rutherford, New Jersey, U.S.A., 1992. Hardcover. Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: New. From Library Journal: This new collection of Rooney's newspaper essays from the last three years presents more of the 60 Minutes commentator's folksy humor found in earlier books ( Not That You Asked, LJ 5/1/89; Word for Word, LJ 2/1/87). In 130 pieces running one to two pages in length, Rooney, without his annoying TV whine, offers his personal and opinionated observations on a wide range of topics: weekend chores; wives who clean up their husbands' woodworking shops ("Now my scraps of wood are in neat piles. I can't find them, but they're neatly piled"); Las Vegas; New York City; help-wanted ads; Frank Sinatra; and congressmen ("Is a little graft, a few thousand corrupt bucks, too much for us to forgive these underpaid public servants? "). There's no great depth here, and, read collectively, Rooney's essays become monotonous and predictable. Still, his book is the perfect brain candy, easy to digest one piece at a time and quickly forgotten. For collections where Rooney is popular. - Wilda Williams, "Library Journal" Copyright 1992 Reed Business Information, Inc. Ingram A selection of Rooney's newspaper essays from the last three years, 130 pieces in all, offers observations on such things as politicians, perfume, the post office, birthdays, doctors, and body-building. 75, 000 first printing. $50, 000 ad/promo.
