By Marvin Leslie Hayward. They tell me, began the little widow timidly, that you never take a case unless you are satisfied that your client is in the absolute right of the matter, and that when you do you never fail to win. Some kind friend must have been overrating my slight ability, laughed Frazer MacKenzie, but that is partly right. I pledged myself when I was admitted to the Bar that I'd let the other fellows handle the ordinary cases, but that I'd never let a wrong go unrighted if I could puzzle any way out. I'm afraid it's useless to take up your time, hesitated the widow. Tell me your story, urged MacKenzie, and I'll soon tell you whether I can do anything or not. I am Mrs. Leslie Franklin, and I was formerly Miss Mabel Trafford of this city, she explained. About twelve years ago my father died and left me a building on the corner of Duke and Valley streets. And you sold the property for a fraction of its actual value queried MacKenzie. Yes, and to make matters worse it was father's brother, John Trafford, who tricked me into giving it away. He told me that insurance and taxes were high and that business was moving away from that part of the city, and I gave him a deed of it for 10,000. The old scoundrel, exclaimed the lawyer. He's the biggest crook in the...
