And the poet who overhears Some random word they say, Is the fated man of men Whom the ages must obey. It is interesting in our survey of the past to study the crises in the world s history, and notice how Providence has, by particular surroundings and education, prepared special men for special emergencies. Seers, prophets, and teachers have been divinely raised up to interpret the mind of God to men, the Heroes, Sages, Bards sublime, And all that fetched the flowing rhyme From genuine springs. In one of these crises, - that of the last half of the eighteenth century, - there was a stirring of the depths in all departments of human life. Literature, the outcome of the whole life of a people, was consequently involved in the revolutionary conflagration which ran over all the European world, from the ashes of which arose new ideas of mankind. Poetry had been removed from its natural home, the country, and was forced to do service in the artificial surroundings of city life.
