Excerpt from New York by Sunlight and Gaslight: A Work Descriptive of the Great American Metropolis; Its High and Low Life, Its Splendors and Miseries, Its Virtues and Vices, Its Gorgeous Palaces and Dark Homes of Poverty and Crime, Its Public Men, Politicians, Adventurers, Its Charities, Frauds, Etc What Paris is to the Frenchman, or London to the Briton, New York is to the American. It is not only the Great Metropolis of the New World, but it is the chief attraction upon this continent, the great centre to which our people resort for business and pleasure, and as such, is a source of never-failing interest. This being the case, it is natural that every American should desire to visit New York, to see the City for himself, behold its beauties, its wonderful sights, and participate in the pleasures which are to be enjoyed only in the Metropolis. Thousands avail themselves of this privilege every year; but the great mass of our people know our chief City only by the descriptions of their friends, and the brief accounts of its sights and scenes which occur from time to time in the newspapers of the day. Even those who visit the city bring away but a superficial knowledge of it, as to know New York requires years of constant study and investigation. Strangers see only the surface; they cannot penetrate into its inner life, and examine the countless influences at work every day in shaping the destiny of the beautiful city. Few, even of the residents of the Metropolis, have either the time or the means for such investigations. Few have a correct idea of the terrible romance and hard...
