In severe cases it covers the entire conjunctiva and can only be removed by force, leaving a raw surface. 8. Constitutional Symptoms will only be present when the disease is diphtheritic. Cause.--When the Klebs-Loffler bacillus can be demonstrated the nature of the disease and its cause are definitely determined. The exact cause of the cases in which this bacillus cannot be demonstrated is, as yet, unknown. Treatment.--For mild cases follow the treatment recommended for catarrhal conjunctivitis (page 94) being careful though not to use nitrate of silver until the membrane has disappeared. Before the separation of the membrane cleansing the conjunctival sac three or four times a day with an antiseptic solution (bichlorid 1 to 5,000) is advised. In the severe form follow the treatment as suggested for purulent conjunctivitis (page 97) except that cold applications must not be used as continuously owing to greater danger of depressing the circulation, and nitrate of silver must be applied with caution and then not until the membrane has been thrown off. If the diphtheritic bacillus can be demonstrated constitutional treatment, including anti-toxin injections, should be instituted at once. LESSON XV. DISEASES OF THE CONJUNCTIVA (Continued). GRANULAR CONJUNCTIVITIS OR TRACHOMA. The characteristic feature of this disease is hypertrophy of the conjunctiva and the appearance in that membrane of small granular bodies. Trachoma may assume three forms: 1. Papillary trachoma in which the characteristic...
