Not illustrated. 1828 Excerpt: . the great Mound at Marden, a few years ago, was levelled, the Chapter of Winchester Cathedra, who are the lords of the manor, were written to, that their fiat might prevent the farmers from levelling it, but, though Druids themselves, according to Mr. Higgins, they barbarously left it to its fate. X See Nares Glossary, article Tout. It is derived, in my opinion, from the very circumstance of the hills called Touts t From the idea that a simulacrum, probably of stone originally, stood on the top of Silbury hill, I had it examined with this particular view, conceiving there would be a hole in the middle of the area, on the top of the hill where the stone or image stood. Exactly so it was found; the hole is three feet deep, and the diameter about nine; but it should at the same time be remarked, that about sixty years since the hill was dug through exactly in the middle, from the top to the bottom. This cavity would undoubtedly have remained, as, at the time, that which was thrown out would, in con-quence of want of compression, be more than sufficient to fill up the chasm; for in the course of yeats a subsidence would take place; but I think the hole would not have been so marked and deep as it now appears, unless there had been some depression before the shaft was sunk; and, as a proof, . Mr. Britton observes,...
