A disciple of Confucius asked him the same question as the above. Confucius answered, The duty of a good son nowadays means only to be able to support his parents. But you also keep your dogs and horses alive. If there is no feeling of love and respect, where is the difference? 9. Another disciple asked the same question. Confucius answered, The difficulty is with the expression of your look. That merely when anything is to be done the young people do it, and when there is food and wine the old folk are allowed to enjoy it, --do you think that is the whole duty of a good son? 10. Confucius, speaking of a favourite disciple whose name was Yen Hui, remarked, I have talked with him for one whole day, during which he has never once raised one single objection...
