Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Napoleon Against Russia: The Campaign of 1806-1807, December to June On the passions, and on the endeavours of these men, one verse of an old song, one inspiring phrase of an ardent hero, one fanatic invocation to Allah, one reminiscence of international hate, one glance of a good and lovely, or even of an unprincipled and leering female eye, would produce more potent influences than would all the calculations of all the philosophers from Democritus to Darwin. From the ancient fortresses of Byzantium to the home of Virgil by the Eridanus, from the wall of Hadrian in North Britain to the gate of the Holy War in Servia, and to that plain where Gustavus Adolphus the Swede, at the beginning of a new era of European civilisation, taught a new art of war through all peoples as dissimilar as the Italians, and Bavarians, and Spanish, who fought for him, and the Scandinavians, and Britons, and Cossacks, who fought against him in North Germany, the name of the Corsican was everything - everything to British seamen, to the Hetman of the Don, the ambassador of the Shah, the Prussian student, the Hungarian hussar. Nor, indeed, did Napoleon ever occupy a more prominent place in the minds of men than to-day, a hundred years after he reached the Maine on his march to the ruin of Prussia.
