A merrier man Within the limit of becoming mirth I never spent an hour s talk withal. Shakespeare. HE death of Mr. Justice Hayes (better known to the profession as Mr. Serjeant Hayes) has created many an aching void in family and private friendships, and innumerable regrets in all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. The late judge was called to the bar by the honourable society of the Middle Temple, in Hilary term, 1830, and joined the Midland Circuit. He soon succeeded in acquiring a good share of practice, especially what is termed chamber practice, having always had the reputation of being a good case man. He was raised to the dignity of the coif in 1856, received a patent of precedence in 1861, became Recorder of Leicester on the resignation of Mr. Serjeant Goulburn, which office he resigned in 1868 on becoming one of the judges of the Court of Queen s Bench, being succeeded in his recordership by C. G. Merewether, Esq., of the Norfolk Circuit. Mr. Justice Hayes tenure of the dignified position to which he had attained was unhappily of short duration, barely fifteen months having expired ere he was attacked by a fatal illness in his private room at Westminster after a hard day s work at Nisi Prius. From this attack he never rallied, expiring a few days afterwards at the age of sixty-five. No man was more highly estimated by his...
